ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE IN AGRICULTURE ISSUES AND PROSPECTS

Naveen P Singh & Ranjith PC

Technology is the key driver of 21st century world. From the trunk dial to video call, steam engine to metro, sprayer to drones, technology has revolutionised the life of humans across the world. Besides, it also played crucial role to industrialize the countries around the world and formalized their economy in a significant way. The world is now ready to embrace the idea of 4th Industrial revolution which is likely to be led by Artificial Intelligence (AI). At this juncture it is imperative to give a big push to a rather neglected sector; Agriculture, by leveraging AI so as to revive and sustain the sector for the generations ahead.

Technology in agriculture is a decisive element in enhancing the scale of production and productivity. As per Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) estimates, India has to double its agriculture output by 2050 to feed the growing population. In the wake of fragmentation and subdivision of land holdings coupled with less emphasis on collective and cooperative farming, the arable land cannot be increased. The only viable option before us is to increase the productivity of the available land through improved technology. However, it is a established fact that technology adoption in farming sector is very slow due to several inherent reasons. In addition the required skill sets at individual farmer level to operationalize the modern agriculture technology is less than required. Apart from this, technology has to face behavioural test (Technology adoption) of individual farmers. With these problems and challenges on hand, the solution lies in our finger tips, that is to bring AI led innovation to agriculture, which is having less human interface in decision making and high adoption of needed technologies.

Input to policy shift

Improving agricultural productivity is not a simple task. It involves activities starting from crop decision to final harvest and marketing of farm produce. Usually, many of our farmers rely on experiential knowledge/traditional wisdom to decide on ploughing, sowing seeds, applying fertilizers and pesticides and harvesting the produce. But, it is less viable in curbing the wide array of challenges viz., pest, disease, monsoon etc. leading to low yields and thereby face economic hardships. Therefore scientific intervention in ensuring farmer to be informed is crucial to enhance farm productivity.

Hence, the solution for these problems and challenges is to have a self-guided automatic model that understands the behavior of various stakeholders for the benefit of all. Moreover, Artificial Intelligence (AI) is part of the solutions towards improved agricultural productivity. AI can be described as simulated algorithmic computer models that mimic the human behavior. The process begins with imagining a robotic friend/ installed application that guides our farmer when to grow, harvest and sell his/her produce and link our agriculture resource persons to track the most pressing problems faced by farmers through searches (Google analytics) made by farmers so that they can act/react immediately. It can also act as digital data for policymakers for exploring various effective programme/policy options and interventions thereof. Moreover AI would be prudent option to leverage before

CAREERS IN BUSINESS ANALYTICS

Dr. Satya Prakash Pandey

The technological advances of the last decades have impacted our world, and the business world in particular, in fundamental ways. Massive amounts of data are being gathered and stored, from individual medical records to every single truck movement via GPS for large logistics providers. Consequent to decades of information technology deployment, organizations today have more information at hand than ever before. But in many cases the information is not being utilized to out- think the rivals. Thus, organizations are missing out on a potent competitive tool. Moreover, ever faster computers and optimization methods have become available to transform this data into information for better decision-making. All of this makes it possible to apply advanced analytical methods to business problems that were impossible two decades ago - ranging from detailed supply chain optimization to health care applications and the service industry. Data driven decisions based on the principles of management science and operations research have always been popular in large, professionally managed corporates but have become far more pervasive with the emergence of data science and business analytics. Data science grew out an exponential growth in the availability of data that is automatically generated through digital transactions like phone calls, card swipes, electronic fund transfers, e-Commerce, social media and finally, from smart sensors that are a part of the "Internet of Things".

The ancient science of statistics has found a new life and relevance because of the availability of software tools and techniques that allow oceans of data to be churned at ease to yield the valuable butter of managerial insight that allows us to address real life situations faced by managers in areas like retail, telecom, banking, finance, insurance and operations as well as Politics also. This is the genesis of the Business Analytics.

Business Analytics

Business analysis is the discipline of identifying business needs and determining solutions to business problems. These solutions may include improvement of business processes, accommodating/incorporating new processes or strategic planning and policy development. The person who performs this role of identification and determination is called a Business Analyst or BA. This role has emerged with evolution of software engineering and raise of Rational Unified Process-RUP to mitigate risk in project management. Clients do not have the time to make the technical team understand how business operations, processes, compliances and competitors work; nor does the project manager have time to make business people understand how technology worked. This position of a BA actually fills this gap, to make the project successful.

CAREERS ...

Business Analytics is about quantitative analysis and predictive modeling towards data-driven competitive strategies. Exemplars of analytics are using tools to identify their most profitable customers; offer the right price; accelerate product innovation; optimize supply chains; identifying the true drivers of financial performance etc. Organizations as diverse as HSBC, PepsiCo, Amazon, Barclay's, Capital One, Procter & Gamble, Wachovia, and the research agencies illuminate how to leverage the power of analytics. Competence in analytics along with the ability to handle big-data has become a critical skill for managers of the new age business world.

Business Analyst vs. Data Scientist

Business Analytics & Data Science lie at the intersection of three key disciplines, namely Statistics & Machine Learning, Programming and the targeted Business Domain and this program is designed to address all three in significant depth. The backbone of analytics is the theory of statistics in general and machine learning in particular and these two key areas are offered as two different areas.

The role of a Business Analyst involves researching and extracting valuable information from data sources to explain business performance (present and future). A Business Analyst also determines the right approach to improve the business. Business Analysts come with domain expertise but limited statistical abilities. This gap is filled by Data Scientists who are advanced statisticians.

A Data Scientist develops and deploys algorithms using statistical programming that support the Business Analyst's plans. A Data Scientist automates the Data Analyst's plans and models to help the business enhance output and performance.

Need for Business Analytics

Business problems need solutions based on data, not intuition. Yet most organizations struggle to translate the abundance of data they have today into meaningful business insights. Now more than ever, data analytics, approached with a business management mindset, is an essential function for successful decision making in every industry.

A Business Analyst is a hybrid

IT/Business professional much in demand but scarce in availability. A Business Analyst advises organizations to follow best practices, helps in building appropriate solution strategies, provides solution assessment & validation etc. A well trained and an experienced Business Analyst is an indispensable asset to an organization. He can help frame problems, create comparisons, forecast outcomes, and make predictions. And the people who can make meaning from data in a way that stakeholders and executives can easily understand often become some of the most valued people in a company.

Skill Gap (Market Size)

There has been extensive popular interest in Business Analyst over the past few years, including popular business press books like "Competing on Analytics and Predictive Analytics." This reflects the significant business interest in translating analytics into business advantage. Employment forecasts predict a huge growth for managers who understand analytics to lead big data initiatives in the business world over the next decade.

The demand for Business analytics is huge in both domestic and international job markets. According to Newscom, India's analytics market would increase two times to INR 15000 Crores by the end of 2019. There has never been a better time to make a career into Business Analytics. This course will assist prospect interns in preparing for a career in the field of data analytics by providing you end-to-end career support, right from skill-based business analytics training to job assistance.

According to research conducted by McKinsey Global Institute - by 2018 the business universe will experience a shortage of 190,000 skilled data scientists, and 1.5 million managers and analysts capable of reaping actionable insights from the big data deluge. With an estimated 40,000 exabytes of data being collected by 2020 - up from 2700 exabytes in 2012 - the implications of this shortage become apparent.

The average starting salary of a Business Analytics in the data industry is Rs 15000 per month. Depending on various posts, the salary range varies Rs.12000 to Rs.45000 per month (min.). The special packages, bonus, incentives offered are part of this career. The remuneration outside India also varies depending upon many factors such as organization, type of analysis and places.

Skill Gain

As opted this, interns will chart a path to analytics excellence for themselves, for division and for the organization. They know how to use business analytics as a strategic advantage.

Customer Analytics

Customer analytics, also called customer data analytics, is the systematic examination of a company's customer information and customer behavior to identify, attract and retain the most profitable customers.

Descriptive Analytics

In this we learn what data can and can't describe about customer behavior as well as the most effective methods for collecting data and deciding what it means. Understanding of the critical difference between data which describes a causal relationship and data which describes a correlative one as you explore the synergy between data and decisions, including the principles for systematically collecting and interpreting data to make better business decisions. Interns also learn how data is used to explore a problem or question, and how

23. Instruction to Candidate for Answer Sheet:

Method of marking Answers:

- In the "OBJECTIVE TYPE" examination, you do not write the answers. For each question (hereinafter referred to as "Item") several suggested answers (hereinafter referred to as "Responses") are given. You have to choose one response to each item.
- The question paper will be in the Form of TEST BOOKLET. The booklet will contain item bearing numbers 1,2,3.....etc. Under each item, Responses marked (a), (b), (c), (d) will be given. Your task will be to choose the correct response. If you think there is more than one correct response, then choose what you consider the best response.
- In any case, for each item you are to select only one response. If you select more than one response, your response will be considered wrong.
- In the Answer Sheet, Serial Nos from 1 to 100 are printed. Against each number, there are circles marked (a), (b), (c) and (d). After you have read each item in the Test Booklet and decided which one of the given responses is correct or the best, you have to mark your response by completely blackening with BLACK BALL PEN to indicate your response.
- For example, if the correct answer to item 1 is (b), then the circle containing the letter (b) is to be completely blacked with black ball pen as shown below :
Example : (a) (b) (c) (d)
- Candidates must write the papers in their own hand. In no circumstances will they be allowed the help of a scribe.
- Please read and abide by the instructions on the cover of Test Booklet. If any candidate indulges in disorderly or improper conduct, he will render himself liable for disciplinary action and/or imposition of a penalty as the competent authority may deem fit.
- Candidates should exercise due care in handling and filling up the answer sheets. They should use BLACK BALL PEN only to darken the circles, for writing in boxes also, they should use BLACK BALL PEN. Since the entries made by the candidates by darkening the circles will be taken into account while evaluating the answer sheets, they should make these entries very carefully and accurately.
- Pens with any other colours are prohibited. Do not use Pencil or Ink pen. Candidates should note that any omission/ mistake/discrepancy in encoding/ filling of details in the OMR answer sheet, especially with regard to Roll Number will render the answer sheet liable for rejection.

policy establishments who are toiling to double the farmers income by 2022. The collection of massive data by way of digitalization of agriculture is to give a new dimension to develop and deploy AI in agriculture. Last year, farmers of Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh rely on the messages for sowing crops delivered using AI by Microsoft and International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics (ICRISAT). Globally, AI has provided wider opportunities to farmers, organisations and governments. This helps in two ways; firstly by knowing the exact parameters farmers can upload their produce parameters in online platforms like e-NAM, e-GraMS and others, thereby reducing the cost of marketing, wastage and problem of middleman significantly. Secondly it helps someone who is sitting far from the place of produce to initiate the process of buying and reselling. Further forecasting market price is important to receive remunerative price by producers and algorithmic models that use the price data of previous years tell us the possible price. Currently there is practice of manual price feeding to predict the price. With the help of AI models automated price feeding can be made thereby lessening the scope of price manipulation and errors due to false feeding. In a significant development, a private firm Markets and Markets valued artificial intelligence (AI) in agriculture market across the globe to USD 432.2 Million in 2016 and is further expected to be valued at USD 2,628.5 Million by 2025, at a CAGR of 22.5% during the forecast period (considering 2016 as base year).

Another important factor that could bring a paradigm shift in predicting price and streamlining the flow of agri commodities is supply chain management. It brings radical change in absorption of surplus commodity (peak season) provided by AI aided software that meticulously manages commodity exchange among the stakeholders in the market (through backward and forward linkages of commodity). It uses the data of various markets (e-NAM and Agri Census data) and retail demand schedule at a particular time to give matching figure of space availability to each crop before sowing/deciding. Apart from this, integration of value chains-stocks/ storage space (currently no functional mechanism to trace storage availability), procurement and ICT enabled banking service helps to bring globalization in value chains. Possibly to aid this endeavour of market prediction and price forecasting limited AI model which predicts things on evolutionary ladder would be helpful.

Soil and water management

Soil and water are facing severe threat under modern agriculture practices involving inorganic chemical to influence the crop productivity. It hampers the efficient resource utilization and technology adoption in the long run that may result in reducing the yields and posing severe threat to food security. The most preferable type of AI to explore and conserve the benefits of soil and water would be Reactive AI, where it basically works on perception of surrounding conditions and acts on what it sees. Thus, any deviation to the health of soil and water would be easily recognized so as to ensure fertility status of soil and quality of water. Further AI led recognition and deep learning models can also use the integrated data signals from satellite and compare it with the local farm image thereby helping to know soil health and propose immediate action plan to restore the soil health. Thus, it reduces the high cost of laboratory testing infrastructure in monitoring soil health and paves way for spot distribution of soil health card. Berlin-based agricultural tech startup PEAT developed application called Plantix which identifies potential defects and nutrient deficiencies in the soil. This particular software algorithms also correlates particular foliage patterns with certain soil defects, plant pests and diseases thereby immensely saving on costs.

Nearly 89 percent of ground water extracted is used for agriculture inefficiently posing a serious question of water usage and its management. This situation has placed India to the net water exporter thereby raising question on future water availability with increasing uncertainty of monsoon. India being poor resource utilizer in terms of increasing the yield of cereals (major chunks in food security) compared to USA and China, has to adopt resilient resource strategy. As stated above, Reactive AI models store the crop specific moisture requirement and assess the moisture content in the field using the remote satellite and signals the farmer through text message. This can also augment laying of auto irrigation from borewell. This helps in curbing the indiscriminate use of water in crop production.

As the Indian soils are becoming the storehouse of chemical residues causing significant imbalances in soil health on one hand and yield gaps across different crops and regions, it is imperative to leverage AI to hold down the healthy soil to feed generation ahead. NITI Ayog has recently cautioned about severe water crisis that country might face in next decades as nearly 70 percent is contaminated. This sounds clear signal to look for an alternative methods for judicious resource use.

Agri-Startup

Agri startups become key in unleashing the farm potential by providing the crucial technology. Some of the AI startups like Intello labs, Aibono, Thrithi robotics and Satsure are successfully using the AI to predict yield, stabilize the yield, soil analysis and predicting economic value of future yield. Further giving emphasis and incentives to AI led innovation and startups will add significant number of employment. Given the fact that startup become new age tech giant in India that could be trusted to achieve sustainable agriculture development on one hand and securing food and nutritional security to the people on the other hand. This may go a long way in achieving sustainable developmental goals (SDGs) effectively.

Takeoff: Current digital drive

Digitalization of agriculture is on its path even though it has been ranked on bottom in the industry surveys on the state of digitalization. In India digitalization through Digital India programme reaching the villages through OFC is essential input in leveraging AI techniques in agriculture. With the fleet of ~30 million smart phone owning farmers and an expected increase of internet usage in rural India to 315 million by 2020, it's an easy way to connect, communicate and coordinate. Accenture study reveals that digital farming and connected farm services can impact 70 million Indian farmers in 2020, adding USD 9 billion to farmer incomes.

Initiatives to increase the digital literacy are another benefit before us to thrust AI as a game changer. Moreover, information availability during crop production and marketing will help to reduce the crop and income loss, thereby realization of doubling farmer's income at the earliest. Probably, in the right direction, NITI Ayog and IBM have signed a Statement of Intent (Sol) to develop a crop yield prediction model using Artificial Intelligence (AI) to provide real time advisory to farmers in aspirational Districts.

Technology in India has travelled several miles touching the lives and aspiration of 1.3 billion people. It improved the lives of many people and agriculture has shown unprecedented progress beginning from high yielding variety to algorithm trade strategies/models. However, sector still remain underdeveloped in terms of bridging yield gaps on production fronts and ameliorating supply side constraints thereby giving market and price access. Assessing demand and supply situations, crop competitiveness and regional crop planning can come handy with AI. Startups are emerging in agriculture and the technologies developed by them are matching the global standards and has aspirations to solve these problems through AI. However, needed support of government in disseminating their technology via extension network is warranted in the initial stages. The immediate reform needed is to bring the AI policy to involve AI deployment to solve the urgent and most pressing problems on priority basis. This policy has to touch upon most pressing sector in current and vulnerable areas in future. The early steps taken to adopt the AI led innovation would propel the second Green Revolution with income security to farmers. Finally, for realizing futuristic benefits of AI across all stakeholder in agriculture, policy push with synergy between central and state governments is a must.

to use that data to create products, marketing campaigns, and other strategies. By understanding this interns have a solid understanding of effective data collection and interpretation so that you can use the right data to make the right decision for business organization.

Predictive Analytics

Once data has been collected and interpreted, what do we do with it? One will learn how to take the next step: how to use data about actions in the past to make-to-make predictions about actions in the future. Interns will examine the main tools used to predict behavior, and learn how to determine which tool is right for which decision purposes. Additionally, they will learn the language and the frameworks for making predictions of future behavior. Getting this they will be able to determine what kinds of predictions you can make to create future strategies, understand the most powerful techniques for predictive models including regression analysis, and be prepared to take full advantage of analytics to create effective data-driven business decisions.

Prescriptive Analytics

One learns how prescriptive analytics provide recommendations for actions you can take to achieve your business goals. First, you'll explore how to ask the right questions, how to define your objectives, and how to optimize for success. You'll also examine critical examples of prescriptive models, including how quantity is impacted by price, how to maximize revenue, how to maximize profits, and how to best use online advertising i.e. social media & strategy. By the end of this module, interns may be able to define a problem, define a good objective, and explore models for optimization which take competition into account, so that you can write prescriptions for data-driven actions that create success for your company or business.

Capstone Project/ Application/ case study

How do top firms put data to work? In this interns will learn how successful businesses use data to create cutting-edge, customer-focused marketing practices. They will explore real-world examples of the five-pronged attack to apply customer analytics to marketing, starting with data collection and data exploration, moving toward building predictive models and optimization, and continuing all the way to data-driven decisions. At the end of this, they will know the best way to put data to work in business, based on the most innovative and effective data-driven practices of today's top firms.
